

Untethered

Aura, a prisoner of war from the devastated Kingdom of Brej, is taken captive to work as a slave in the castle of Fydip. She gets caught up in the politics and secrecies of Fydip that prove to be perilous to her. Will she manage to escape from the shackles of Fydip and her love for King Kal? Will she have the strength to trade passion for freedom? -- I used to think that I had reached the limit of pain. That nothing else could further damage me. Well, I had exceeded that limit. I had seen too much. I had been excessively exposed to bloodshed, pandemonium and terrorism. -- I was welcomed into the cellar with an open door. How long had he been waiting? I wondered. He leaned across the wall with his arms folded. He was wearing this white shirt that made his arms look muscular and over that he wore a brown, leather vest. He was quite handsome with brown hair, a nice nose and lips that thinned into a smirk when he saw me. I quickly looked away. I thought you would never come. He said. He talked very nonchalantly, unlike the way he had done in the gardens. Will you come down or are you going to keep standing there? Shut the door behind you.
